

139252 - How Can I Encourage My Child to Fast?

the question

I have a son who is nine years old and I would like your help in teaching me how I can make my son get used to fasting Ramadan in sha Allah, because he only fasted 15 days of Ramadan last year.

Summary of answer

Eleven tips on how to get your children accustomed to fasting:

1. Telling them of the virtues of fasting.
2. Prior experience of getting used to fasting, such as fasting a few days in the month of Sha`ban.
3. Fasting part of the day and increasing the time gradually.
4. Delaying Suhur (pre-dawn meal) until the last part of the night.
5. Encouraging them to fast by giving them rewards each day or each week.
6. Praising them in front of the family.
7. Instilling a spirit of competition for the one who has more than one child.
8. Distracting the one who gets hungry by letting him sleep or play permissible games.
9. It is preferable for the father to take his son — especially after `Asr — to attend the prayer and lessons, and to stay in the mosque to read the Quran and remember Allah.
10. Arranging visits during the day and night to families whose young children are also fasting, so as to encourage them to carry on fasting.
11. Rewarding them with permissible trips after iftar, or making the kinds of food, sweets, fruits and juices that they want.

We are very happy to see questions like this, which is indicative of great care and concern for children and for raising them to worship Allah. This is good care for those whom Allah has entrusted to the parents' care.

Enjoining parents to raise their children to do acts of worship

A boy of nine years of age is not one of those who are accountable for fasting according to Shari`ah (Islamic law), because he has not yet reached puberty . But Allah has enjoined parents to raise their children to do acts of worship. Allah commands them to teach their children the prayer when they are seven years old, and to smack them (lightly) if they do not do it when they are ten years old. The Companions (may Allah be pleased with them) used to make their children fast when they were small so as to make them get used to this great act of worship. All of that is indicative of great concern to raise one's children with the best of attributes and deeds.

- With regard to prayer:

The Messenger of Allah (blessings and peace of Allah be upon him) said: “ Teach your children to pray when they are seven years old and smack them if they do not pray when they are ten years old, and separate them in their beds.” (Narrated by Abu Dawud (495) and classed as authentic by Al-Albani in Sahih Abu Dawud)

- With regard to fasting:

Ar-Rubayyi` bint Mu`awwidh ibn `Afra' (may Allah be pleased with her) said: On the morning of `Ashura, the Messenger of Allah (blessings and peace of Allah be upon him) sent word to the villages of the Ansar around Madinah, saying: “Whoever started the day fasting, let him complete his fast, and whoever started the day not fasting, let him complete the rest of the day (without food).”

After that, we used to fast on this day, and we would make our children fast too, even the little ones in sha Allah. We would make them toys out of wool, and if one of them cried for food, we would give (that toy) to him until it was time to break the fast. (Narrated by Al-Bukhari, 1960 and Muslim, 1136)

Umar (may Allah be pleased with him) said to one who was drunk during Ramadan: “Woe to you! Even our children are fasting!” And he hit him. (Narrated by Al-Bukhari in a Mu`allaq report, Bab Sawm Al-Subyan (Chapter on the fast of children))

At what age should a child start fasting in Ramadan?

The age at which parents should start teaching their children to fast is the age when they are able to fast, which varies according to the physical constitution of each child, but some scholars have defined it as the age of ten years.

How to get your children accustomed to fasting

With regard to means of helping children to get used to fasting, that may involve a number of things, such as:

1. Telling them of the virtues of fasting and that it is one of the most important means of entering Paradise, and that in Paradise there is a gate called Ar-Rayyan through which those who fast will enter.
2. Prior experience of getting used to fasting, such as fasting a few days in the month of Sha'ban, so that fasting in Ramadan will not come as a shock to them.
3. Fasting part of the day and increasing the time gradually.
4. Delaying Suhur (pre-dawn meal) until the last part of the night. That will help them to fast during the day.
5. Encouraging them to fast by giving them rewards each day or each week.
6. Praising them in front of the family at the time of iftar (breaking fast) and Suhur, because that will raise their morale.

7. Instilling a spirit of competition for the one who has more than one child, whilst remembering that it is essential not to rebuke the one who is struggling.
8. Distracting the one who gets hungry by letting him sleep or play permissible games that do not involve effort, as the noble Companions used to do with their children. There are suitable programmes for children and cartoons on the trustworthy Islamic channels with which you can distract them.
9. It is preferable for the father to take his son — especially after `Asr — to attend the prayer and lessons, and to stay in the mosque to read the Quran and remember Allah.
10. Arranging visits during the day and night to families whose young children are also fasting, so as to encourage them to carry on fasting.
11. Rewarding them with permissible trips after iftar, or making the kinds of food, sweets, fruits and juices that they want.

It should be noted that if the child becomes too exhausted, you should not insist that he completes the fast, so that this will not make him hate acts of worship or lead to him lying or make him sick, because he is not yet one of those who are accountable. It is important to pay attention to this and not be harsh with regard to telling the child to fast.

And Allah knows best.
