

146440 - He deposited something in return for getting some money, but when he wanted to take it back, they asked for more

the question

If I go to a pawn shop and give them something of value to receive money, and then I go back to get that something, if they charge me more to buy it back is that riba??.

Detailed answer

Firstly:

It is permissible for the borrower to give something that he owns and that has monetary value, as collateral, whether the value of that thing is less than the value of the loan, or the same, or greater, as a guarantee or surety for the debt that the borrower is committed to paying and so that the lender will be able to take his due if the borrower delays paying him back.

Ibn al-Mundhir (may Allah have mercy on him) said:

They [the scholars] are unanimously agreed that giving collateral when at home and when travelling is permissible.

End quote, al-Ijmaa', 148

Secondly:

It is not permissible for the lender to ask the borrower for more than what he gave him or to stipulate that as a condition. The scholars are unanimously agreed that every loan that brings a benefit is haraam riba; it is not permissible to enter into such an agreement.
