

34518 - If there is half an hour left of the regular work hours of a field worker, should he go back to the office?

the question

What is the ruling on a field worker who moves from site to site for his work, when sometimes there is only half an hour left of his regular hours, and if he goes back to the office it will take him half an hour to get there, then his day will be over. Is it permissible for him to go home in this case? Or what should he do?.

Detailed answer

There is no doubt that you are required to be present for the hours agreed upon in your work contract, and there are no exceptions apart from occasions when permission is given for work purposes or for some need.

Based on this, you should inform your superiors of the situation, and if they give you permission to go home, then you may go home, otherwise you have to go back to the office.

And Allaah knows best.