

6362 - Paying a debt with a check which the vendor has not yet cashed

the question

I bought some merchandise from a company and I paid them by a cheque. It has been so long now and they never cashed it, and the cheque is void by now anyways. Do I still owe them the money or is it their fault for not cashing the cheque and taking the money.

Detailed answer

We put this question to Shaykh Muhammad ibn Saalih al-'Uthaymeen (may Allaah preserve him), who answered as follows:

Yes, you are still in debt to them, because when they did not cash the cheque, the money stayed in your account at the bank. You are in debt to them because the check is merely an instruction to the bank to transfer the money. And Allaah knows best.