

7619 - Leaving blood in the animal after slaughter

the question

Some meat factories in the western countries deliberately do not drain the blood from the animal after slaughter, so that it will weigh more and they will thus make more money from it. What is the ruling on eating this meat?

Detailed answer

We put this question to Shaykh 'Abd-Allaah ibn Jibreel, may Allaah preserve him, who answered as follows:

Leaving the blood in the animal after slaughter and not draining it is haraam and is not permitted. Allaah says (interpretation of the meaning):

“Forbidden to you (for food) are: Al-Maytah (dead animals – cattle-beast not slaughtered), blood...” [al-Maa'idah 5:3]

And Allaah knows best.
